2. Deep Dive: Customer Segments
3. Deep Dive: Trial Store Performance
4. Strategic Recommendations & Next Steps

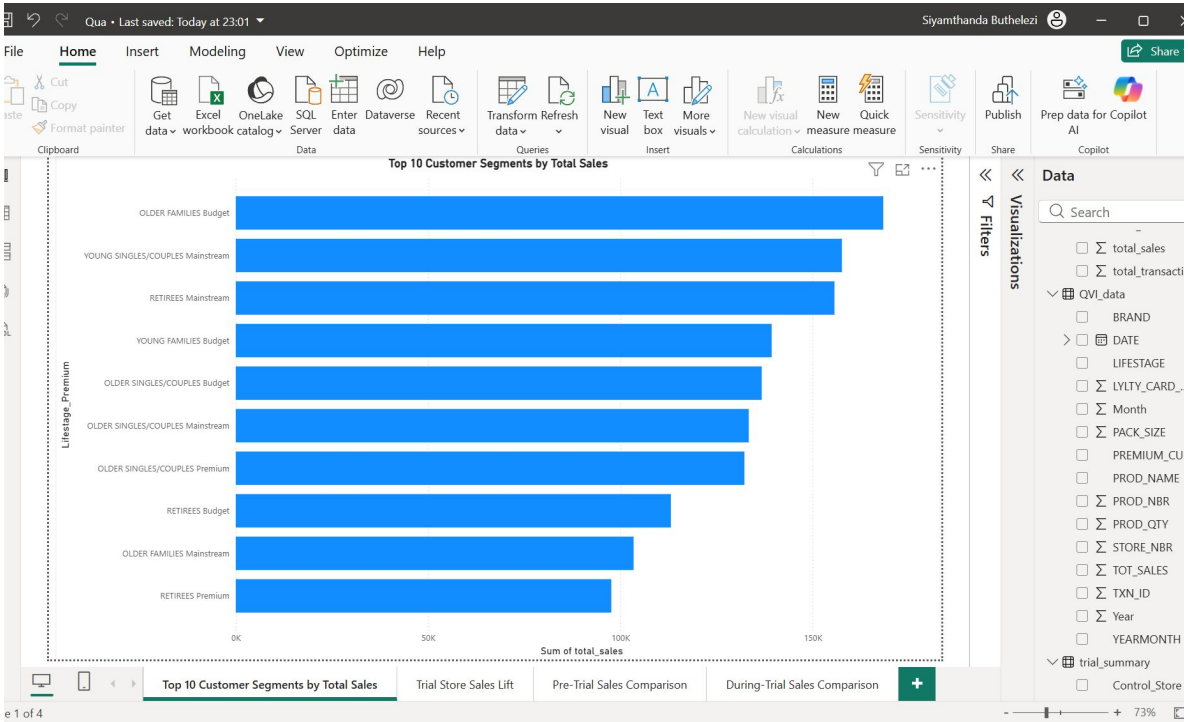
Project Objective

Purpose: To analyze chip purchasing behavior and test a new store layout to provide actionable insights for the H2 strategic plan.

Key Questions:

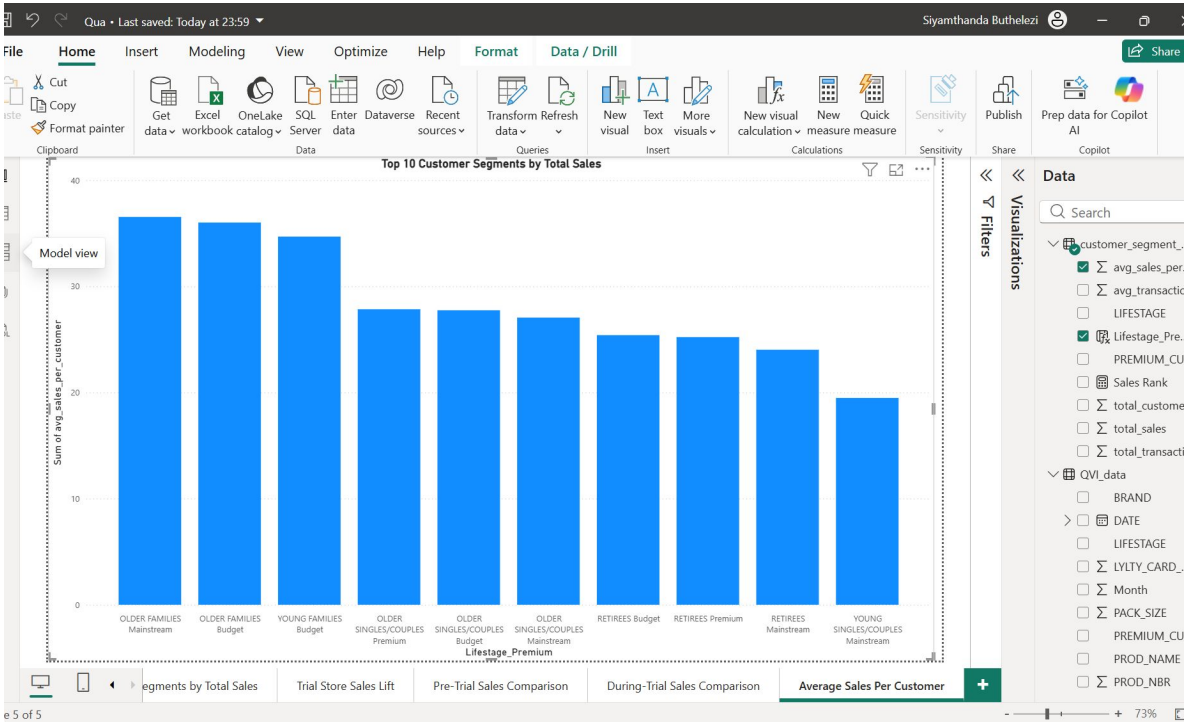
- Who are our most valuable customers and how do they behave?
- Was the new in-store layout successful in driving sales?

Sales are Driven by Three Key Segments



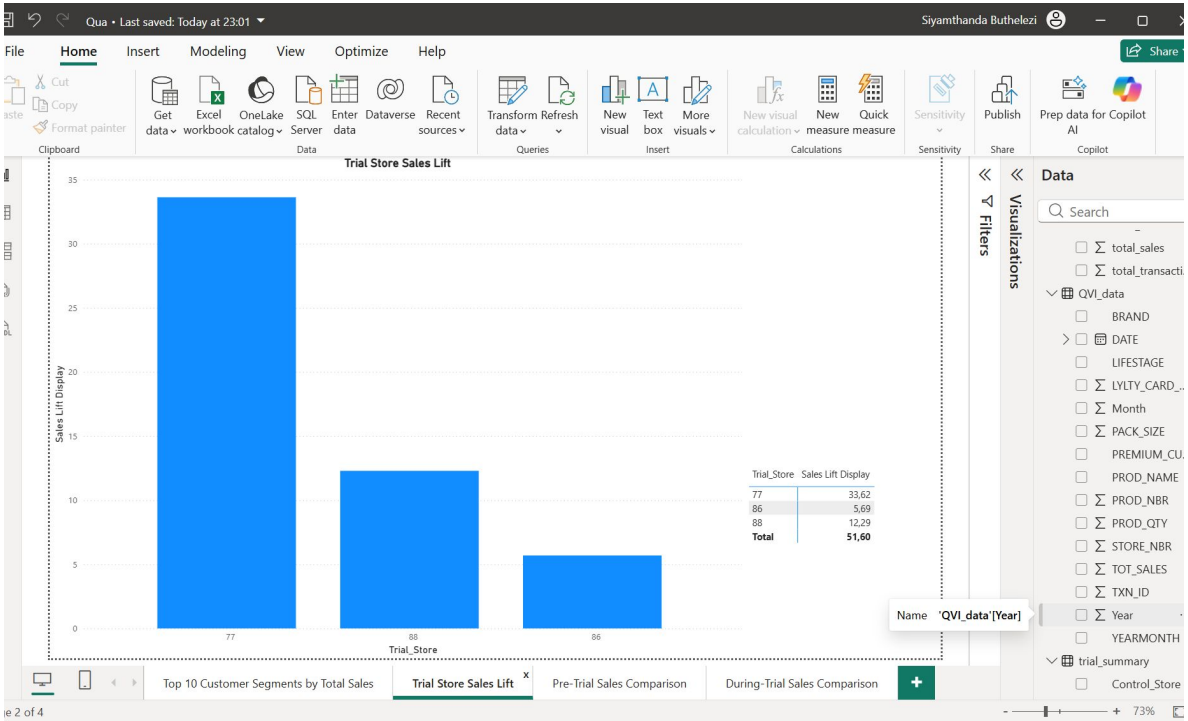
Insight: Older Families (Budget) and Young Singles/Couples (Mainstream) are the largest contributors to total chip sales. Retirees (Mainstream) are also a significant segment.

Segment Spending Habits Reveal Growth



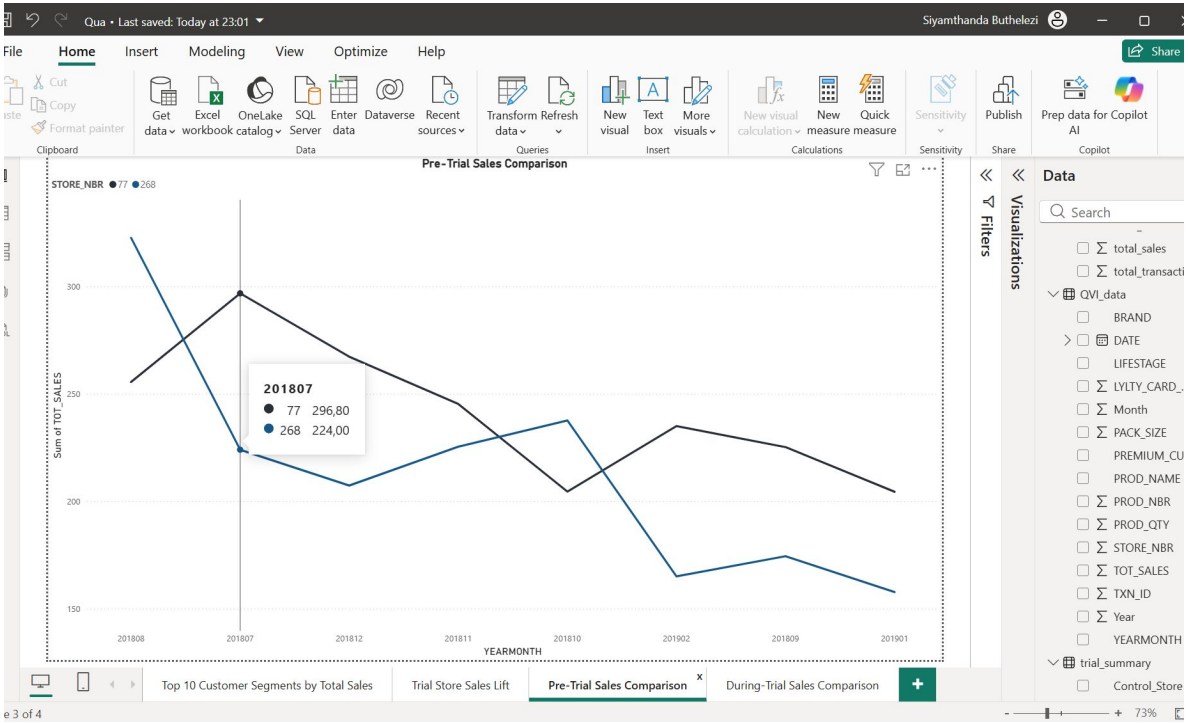
Insight: While Young Singles/Couples have high total sales, their average spend is lower. This suggests frequent, smaller purchases. Promotions like multi-buy deals could increase their basket size.

New Store Layout Proven to Significantly



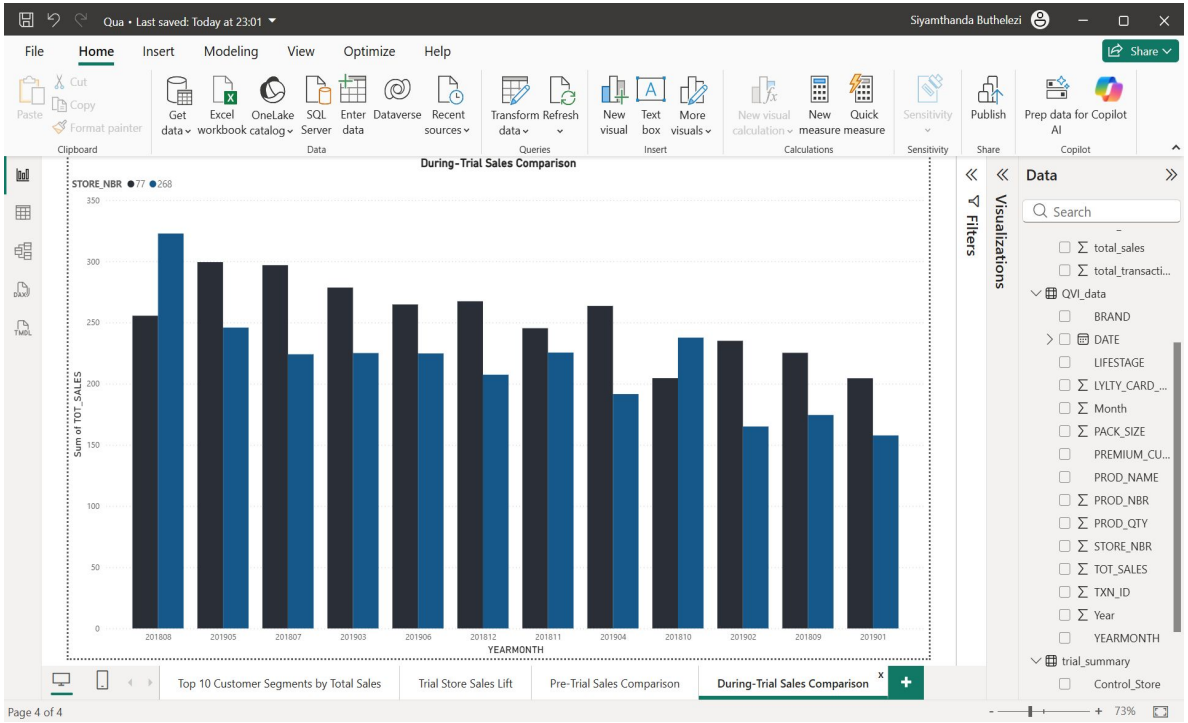
Key Callout: All trial stores outperformed their controls, with Store 77 achieving a remarkable 33.6% sales lift.

Rigorous Analysis Ensures Reliable Results



Insight: The performance of the trial and control stores were nearly identical before the trial, confirming our comparison is valid.

Clear Sales Lift Evident During Trial Period



Insight: The trial store's sales consistently surpassed the control store's during the trial period, demonstrating the layout's effectiveness.

Recommendations for H2 Strategic Plan

Recommendation 1: Targeted Promotions

- Action: Develop segment-specific promotions. For Young Singles/Couples, focus on multi-buy offers to increase basket size. For Older Families, focus on value-based bundles.

Recommendation 2: Full Rollout of New Layout

- Action: Proceed with the full rollout of the new store layout across all stores, prioritizing locations with similar customer profiles to the successful trial stores.
